

Sinclair's decision to force its local stations to show an anti-Kerry film two weeks prior to the election seems to me a clear violation of the public trust implied by their license to use the free airways for the public good. If they do show "Stolen Honor" at the very least they should be forced to show "Going Up River" too. In any event, their decision is an indication of the negative consequences of media consolidation. Their stations should feel the consequences of this at their next license renewal.
